

Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions A/HRC/14/24/Add.1 para 367

Full recommendation:

I therefore again urge your Excellency's Government to expeditiously lift or commute the death sentences imposed against Mr. Abu Moslem Sohrabi, as well as all other persons awaiting execution for offences committed before they reached age 18. All other efforts undertaken by your Government to prevent these executions are insufficient to meet its obligations under international treaties it is a Party to.

Assessment drafted using Impact Iran indicators¹

A. Expeditiously lift or commute the death sentences imposed against Mr. Abu Moslem Sohrabi

In December 2001, Abu Moslem Sohrabi, then a 17-year-old, stabbed a 25-year-old man to death.² Abu claims the act was an act of self defence and that the other party raped him on numerous occasions and was harassing him at the time of the incident.

Abu Moslem Sohrabi was tried by Branch 3 of the Revolutionary Court in Firouzabad and sentenced to death as a *qesas*³ penalty. However, in a letter to the Supreme Court, the judge who issued the original death sentence retracted his ruling in the light of evidence that the defendant was a rape victim and acted in self-defense. In July 2008 Branch 33 of the Supreme Court in Tehran ordered a review of the case but the death sentence was upheld. The current status of Mr. Abu Moslem Sohrabi is unknown. The last known update on his case was registered in 2008 by Amnesty International. The update states that Abumoslem Sohrabi's execution order was approved by the Supreme Court; the case was transferred to the Office of the Implementation of Sentences.⁴ Despite the lack of information regarding Mr. Sohrabi's case, it is not likely that his sentence was lifted or commuted as no such announcement was made by the Iranian Judiciary.

B. Lift or commute the sentences of other persons awaiting execution for offences committed before they reached age 18

International law and human rights treaties define the age of criminal responsibility at 18 years and above, and those below that age are considered to be juveniles.⁵ ICCPR's article 6(5) states that the death sentence should not be applied to crimes committed by persons under the age of eighteen.⁶ However, the laws in Iran, and in particular the Islamic Penal Code, allow death sentences for criminals under the age of 18 to be issued. Article 146 of the Islamic Penal Code of 2013 establishes that people which are not considered mature are not responsible for any crimes, while Article 147 says that the age of maturity for girls is 9 years and for boys 15 years. Article 148 specifies that if an individual commits a crime while being under the age of criminal responsibility, they will still be subjected to the punishments contained in the law⁷. This includes all crimes that are subject to the death penalty in Iran, including murder, *qisas*⁸ (retaliation)⁴, organized crime, sodomy, adultery and moharebeh (waging war with God)⁹. This article seemingly allows for minors to be subjected to such punishments

In the revised Islamic Penal Code of 2013 (IPC), the Islamic Republic took some steps to limiting the issuance of the death penalty to juvenile offenders. Article 91 of the IPC grants the courts the ability to ascertain whether a juvenile defendant was "completely mature" and unaware of the "nature of the crime", at the time it was committed. If the defendant is not deemed mature by the courts at the time of committing the crime, alternative punishments such as imprisonment could be applied. The note of this article specifies that, at the discretion of the judge, the courts can (but are not obligated to) seek a medical expert's opinion from a "legal medical organization" in order to decide on the individual's maturity at the time of committing the crime.

In practice, these amendments to the Islamic Penal Code have not prevented the issuance of execution sentences for juveniles. In recent years, there have been many reports that courts have been selective in applying this article¹⁰. In some cases, despite an expert failing to confirm a juvenile offender's 'maturity' at the time of committing the crime, the presiding judge decided to issue a death penalty anyway.¹¹

⁹ Article 279 of the Islamic Penal Code states: "Moharebeh is defined as drawing a weapon on the life, property or chastity of people or to cause terror as it creates the atmosphere of insecurity."

While Iranian law permits the issuance of the death penalty for those under the age of 18, Iran argues it doesn't carry out juvenile executions.¹² This is because the government of Iran generally doesn't carry out the execution while they are juveniles, but rather issues them a suspended death sentence that is to be carried out after they turn 18. This is contrary to the ICCPR and CRC as per General Comment 36 of the Human Rights Committee¹³ and General Comment 10 of the Committee on the Rights of the Child.¹⁴ In 2017, a number of UN special procedure mandate holders considered the ongoing executions of child offenders in the Islamic Republic of Iran as “conclusive proof of the failure of the 2013 amendments to stop the execution of individuals sentenced to death as children”.¹⁵ In 2019, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran found that the aforementioned assessment of the mental development of the accused at the time of the offence was “arbitrary and inconsistent, and at the sole discretion of the judge, who can choose whether to seek medical advice or not”.¹⁶

Since 1990, Iran has executed more juvenile offenders than any other country in the world, and the number of juveniles executed by Iran's judicial forces is more than double the combined total number of juvenile offenders executed by the remaining nine countries in the list.¹⁷ Iranian authorities executed 5 juvenile offenders (people who were under the age of 18 when committing a crime) in 2017, 6 in 2018 and 4 in 2019.¹⁸ According to Iran Human Rights, Iran was the only country to carry out juvenile executions in 2020, with at least four executions recorded.¹⁹ There are reports of juvenile offenders having their sentences commuted²⁰, yet these reports are few compared to the number of juvenile offenders being executed yearly.
