

Concluding Observation Human Rights Committee CCPR/C/IRN/CO/3 para 13

Full recommendation:

The State party should immediately end the execution of minors, and further amend the draft juvenile crimes investigation act and the Bill of Islamic Criminal Code with the aim of abolishing the death penalty for crimes committed under the age of 18. The State party should also commute all existing death sentences for offenders on death row who had committed a crime while under the age of 18.

Assessment using Impact Iran human rights indicators¹

The Islamic Penal Code (2013)² establishes the age of criminal responsibility to be of 9 lunar years for girls and 15 lunar years for boys.³ However, the age of responsibility for ta'zir crimes (crimes for which specific penalties are not provided for under Islamic law)⁴ is 18. For ta'zir crimes, convicted children are sentenced to correctional measures. In contrast, criminal responsibility for crimes punishable under hudud (punishments established by God) or qisas (punishment or retribution in kind), which carry mandatory punishments, such as the death penalty, is maintained at the age of “maturity”, which is 9 lunar years for girls and 15 lunar years for boys.

The law on the “Protection of Children and Adolescents”,⁵ adopted in June 2020, provides alternative punishments for persons under the age of 18, except for crimes under qisas and hudud. In such cases, sentences that are already established under the Islamic Penal Code prevail.⁶

In cases regarding qisas, the pardon or commutation of the sentence is based solely on the request of the victim or the victim’s guardian. This deprives the child defendant of his or her right to seek pardon or commutation of the sentence by the State.⁷ There are a number of institutions that can intervene in order to mediate cases of children sentenced through qisas. This mediation is notably used to convert qisas sentences into diya sentences (blood money). These institutions include a reconciliation commission, a working group tasked to support mediation with the victim's next of kin, conflict resolution council branches and the Women and Children and Protection Office of the Judiciary.⁸ There is no readily available information that would indicate the number of cases received, reviewed and adjudicated by these institutions.

Article 91 of the Islamic Penal Code, revised in 2013, allows judges to pronounce alternative sentences in circumstances where the juveniles “do not realise the nature of the crime committed or its prohibition, or if there is uncertainty about their full mental development, according to their age”.⁹ The Article further adds that “the court may ask for the opinion of forensic medicine or resort to any other method that it sees appropriate in order to establish the full mental development [of the accused]”. In 2017, a number of UN special procedure mandate holders considered the ongoing executions of child offenders in the Islamic Republic of Iran as “conclusive proof of the failure of the 2013 amendments to stop the execution of individuals sentenced to death as children”.¹⁰ In 2019, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran found that the aforementioned assessment of the mental development of the accused at the time of the offence was “arbitrary and inconsistent, and at the sole discretion of the judge, who can choose whether to seek medical advice or not”.¹¹

Over the years, several executions of child offenders have been commuted in Iran, however, these reports are rare.¹²

In the January 2020 report, the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran wrote that “he continues to monitor the situation of child offenders on death row, and has received information that there are at present at least 100 individuals who have been sentenced to death for crimes committed when they were under 18 years of age”.¹³

The prohibition on the imposition of the death penalty on children is considered to be jus cogens under international law and represents a violation of Articles 6(5) of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and 37(a) of the Convention on the Rights of the Child. The Human Rights Committee has explicitly stipulated that the death penalty cannot be imposed if it cannot be proven, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the accused was 18 years old or older at the time of the offence.¹⁴ Executions of child offenders continue to be carried out in the Islamic Republic of Iran. Four convicted child offenders were reportedly executed in 2019 in the Islamic Republic of Iran.¹⁵

At least 4 juvenile offenders were executed in both 2019 and 2020 respectively. Of those, 2 were executed on rape charges and 6 were executed on murder charges.^{16 17}

There is no readily available information that might indicate the existence of steps taken by the Government to repeal all laws imposing the death penalty against child offenders.

The Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran has not ended the execution of minors, and further amend the draft juvenile crimes investigation act and the Bill of Islamic Criminal Code with the aim of abolishing the death penalty for crimes committed under the age of 18. The Islamic Republic of Iran has not commuted all existing death sentences for offenders on death row who had committed a crime while under the age of 18.
